Down They Go.

Meaning the prices of job printing. The following low rates will hereafter rule at the BULLETIN Job Printing Rooms. They are the lowest ever offered in this city by any printing establishment. The reduction does not mean careless printing and inferior stock, but on the contrary first-class press-work and composition and the best quality of paper:

Bill Heads per ream.....	$5 00
Two Reams.....	9 00
Letter Heads per ream.....	4 50
Packet Note Heads per ream.....	3 00
Commercial Note Heads per ream.....	2 75
Envelopes per thousand.....	3 00
Visiting Cards fifty.....	25c

And other printing at proportionately low prices. Rosser & McCarthy.

THE LITTLE FOXES.

A Lay Sermon.

"Take us the foxes, the little foxes, that spoil the vines: for our vines have tender grapes."—Solomon's Song, 2:15.

DEARLY BELOVED: It is the little things in this life that make up our happiness or misery. If we had to deal only with the great things we could get along. If there were only lions in the way, life would be pleasanter than it is. If we were only expected to be heroes, we could accomplish our warfare and work out our mission with less trouble than now encompasses us. But alas, it is not against lions and great dangers that the voice of inspiration warns us. It is only the "little foxes" we are to take. And the man who despiseth the day of small things is even as he who lifteth up his head in the air and vaunteth himself, even while he sitteth his foot upon the humble banana peel. Faleth he over a man by treading upon a dry goods box, or doth he stumble over a two story house? "Take us the foxes, the little foxes, that spoil the vine."

Brethren, it is easier to kill a lion than to catch a fox. It is easier to build a wagon than it is to make a watch. Great is the warrior who taketh a city, but he is better than the mighty, that is slow to anger, and better is "he that ruleth his spirit" than he that taketh a city.

Why see, how much of human misery is based upon the merest trifles. The man who makes himself supremely wretched because he wants something his neighbor has, and can't get it; the man who swears when he loses his collar button; the man who breaks the furniture because he can't find his hat on the rack when he left it out in the back yard; the man who wants to die when he wakes at night to hear it raining in perfect torrents and remembers that he left all the kindling wood out doors on the cistern box; the man who is unhappy because his boots are tight; the young man, or old man either, who tries to make a forty-dollar salary support a fifty-dollar coat, and is miserable because there is a misfit somewhere; the man who is cross and savage all through house-cleaning week; the man who is always sick and miserable after the picnic; the man who is cross because it is hot, and gruff because it's cold, and irritable because it's wet—what are these men but the tormented victims of "the little foxes that spoil the vines." These men have no heavy burdens, no grave trials. They are miserable because they make themselves so, and they remain miserable because they are too lazy to set a fox trap. If the old world had no heavier sorrows than these, we would be so happy down here some of us wouldn't care to go to Heaven. Lay this paper down right here, dearly beloved, and count up all your own trials and sorrows and tribulations; strike out all the little, petty every-day annoyances you are ashamed to call tribulations, and see how little you have to make life unhappy. Honestly, now, what trouble have you? You need not tell me; just give yourself an honest answer.

If we allowed the great wrongs of life to move us as deeply as do the petty trials; if we endured our light afflictions more patiently, and more valiantly combated the great evils, how soon would we reform this old world. If one-half the indignation that is poured out upon the insensate collar buttons that roll away under the shadowy concealment of impassive lounges and bureaus were as faithful politicians who betray their trusts and barter their principles for place and profit, there would be no mourning over any lack of honest men in public places. If society broke the furniture and foamed at the mouth and fore things when it can find neither its bank account or the Cashier as it does when it simply cannot find its hat, no man could steal trust funds and build a new house therewith. If the man who tries to reverse the appearance of a number nine foot, to make it fit a number six boot, would only try as hard to make his sinful nature compass the virtues of a saint, the world would be fragrant with patience, and his home and neighbors would rise up and call him blessed. We fret and chafe under the little trials, and are too complacent with the great evils. And the man who can ignore the petty vexations and save all his strength of mind and body for the great things, he is the man who leads us all.

It is true, dearly beloved, these petty annoyances make constant demands upon your strength and patience and grace. I know there are a thousand foxes to one lion, and that it is hard work to watch them all the time, but eternal vigilance is the price of a good character, and

"Evil is caused by want of thought
As well as by want of heart."

It would be easier to be a martyr, and go down to the block or to the stake, and have one's head cut off or be burned to a crisp at once and be done with it, than it is to endure eight or ten years of rheumatism. So much the more honor to the patient victims of rheumatism than to the martyrs. I know it is easier to President of the United States, and be a good President, too, than it is to go to sleep with the earache, or with three small mosquitoes in the room, that have made up their minds to a horrible repast of human blood. I know—out of the breadth and depth of my own experience I know whereof I affirm—I know it is an easier matter to edit a newspaper, than it is to put the baby to sleep when the baby isn't feeling particularly sleepy just then. I know the little trials are the hardest; the little temptations are the strongest. The man who would scorn to steal a horse will swear a little sometimes. The man who could not be hired to forge a note will sometimes help to circulate a campaign lie; the man who will not commit murder will occasionally scold his wife; and the man who would scorn alie under any other circumstances can't be trusted in a horse trade. It is easy for any honest man to refuse a bribe; it is hard for the same man to tell the truth about the size and number of the trout he caught. It is comparatively easy to obey the big commandments; it's the finer meshes of the little net that will entangle so many of us.

Dearlly beloved, don't try to be heroes, then. Don't aim to be wingless saints. Don't aspire to the distinction of martyrdom. Try to be good, every day, honest, Christian men and women, and see if you have not your hands full. Don't waste your time lion hunting; the lions never hurt anybody, but "Take us the foxes, the little foxes, that spoil the vines; for our vines have tender grapes."—Burlington Hawkeye.

—Among the surviving members of the Twenty-ninth Massachusetts Regiment, which had its reunion recently, is Charles G. Bosworth, of East Freetown, Mass., who was shot through the body at the Burnside mine explosion. He was removed to the field hospital, examined by the surgeons and labeled "mortally wounded." He tore the label off and repeatedly demanded that his wound be dressed. The surgeon would only reply: "It's no use, you can't live." Bosworth declared that he would not die; that they should dress his wounds; and finally gave them such a tirade of abuse that they, in order to stop it, put him upon the table and operated upon him. He still lives.—Boston Transcript.

DAILY EVENING BULLETIN.

FRIDAY EVENING, NOV. 3, 1882.

TERMS:—The EVENING BULLETIN is published daily, and served free of postage at 6 cents per week; 25 cents per month; 75 cents per three months; $1.50 per six months, and $3 per year, payable in advance.

THE EVENING BULLETIN HAS A LARGER CIRCULATION IN THIS CITY, CHESTER AND ABERDEEN, OHIO, THAN ANY OTHER PAPER PUBLISHED IN MAYSVILLE.

The men who attempted at Catlettsburg to take Neal and Craft from Major Allen's custody fired upon the troops on the Granite State, all the way to Ashland. This fire by command of Major Allen was not returned by the soldiers. At Ashland the troops were again fired upon by a mob, who had taken possession of a ferryboat, and by a large number of persons who were in the crowd assembled on Front street and at the landing. There is not the slightest doubt that a heavy fire was kept up on the troops from the shore. Witnesses can be produced who saw the men who fired from the shore and who counted the shots fired. When the order was given to return the fire it was delivered alike at the ferryboat and at those who were shooting from the river bank. It is an unfortunate circumstance that innocent spectators should have been killed or wounded, but it must be admitted they had no business to be in the midst of a mob who were making an unprovoked and wanton attack upon the lives of the troops who had been sent there to preserve the peace and protect the court in administering the laws of the state. The Cincinnati papers have atrociously misrepresented the affair and purposely suppressed details of the matter that are necessary to a correct understanding of the affair. Major Allen acted throughout with coolness, deliberation and forbearance, and resorted to arms only when it was necessary to do so, and all this will be clearly established when all the facts are made known to the public.

The Ashland Affair—What the Papers Say.

Courier-Journal: Not to maintain the law—to surrender even guilty men at the command of a mob—is to destroy government and return to a state of anarchy. The course of the Governor, the action of the troops and the public sentiment which sustains them must convince all that mob law is not to be the law of Kentucky.

Ashland Independent: It is a very deplorable, and the judges of the court of appeals, who arrested the law in its course and saved the necks of the guilty wretches, who were sentenced to be hung on the 24th of last April, have much innocent blood on their heads. Enough innocent blood has been shed, and we hope the law will be allowed to take its course, even though slow in its operation, and provoking sometimes by its unjust, not to say corrupt, delays.

Louisville Commercial: The battle of Ashland is over, and the soldiers acted bravely and with fine judgment. Major Allen deserves the highest credit for his temperate course in only repelling the mob with shot when it was absolutely necessary. Kentucky has been saved another terrible disgrace by the course of her citizen soldiers.

Yeoman: No latitude should ever be given to a mob, but its spirit should be crushed wherever manifested, for once under full headway it will keep on to the worst state of anarchy, and the guilty and innocent are liable to suffer alike. The Governor was informed that there was an organized body of men in all the Ohio river towns adjacent to Ashland whose purpose it was to take these men from the hands of the law, and execute them, so he sent a considerable number of troops with a section of artillery to prevent any such criminal action, and he did right.

Mrs. Langtry is being persecuted by autograph fiends.

COUNTY POINTS.

MAYSLEICK.

Mr Sam Allen and wife, of Kansas, are visiting their friends and relatives in this vicinity.

Our village is so thriving that a new hotel has been opened to the traveling public styled the Clary House. It has just undergone thorough repairs inside and out.

In reply to "Wide awake," of Helena, to a notice taken of one of my items a short time since, I would state that we have no time to waste on such bosh of his. We deal only in facts and can substantiate what we stated. We believe the said firm is able to pay for what they buy but its true may not be as wealthy as a certain merchant who has his "sanctum sanctorum" at, by, near or close to the Helena depot and who represented himself to a fair damsel across the river in the Buckeye state as being quite wealthy and a big money lender, we were not apprised of the fact before that you were for sale, but in the event we should need a mule will give you a call.

Hugh, aged about eight, son of Mrs. Hannah Forman, while playing around a cider mill when it was in operation got his ankles sprained and some bones crushed in his leg.

C. W. Cook, of Cynthiana made a visit to this place last week.

M. B. Gray, of Cynthiana has been visiting B. Duke Scott.

Miss Ada Mannen of Minerva is visiting the family of Thomas Kilgore.

Monday was uncomfortably warm in the sun.

The Flemingsburg Democrat of the 26th inst. reached this place last Monday.

A goodly number of the relations went to Covington, Monday, on the Kentucky Central Railroad to attend the wedding of Miss Mary, daughter of Col. Nat. Roff.

J. A. Jackson & Son have a large stock of millinery goods which they are offering at prime cost, all fine fresh goods, also a big line of ladies shoes and hosiery at remarkably low figures. You would be astonished to see their goods and learn prices.

A young lady visiting in about three miles of this place is creating quite a sensation among the widowers she had three to call on her last Sunday afternoon the last account we had of her she was still rational.

We were present at the dedication of the Methodist Church, South, at Nepton, last Sunday, Bishop Kavanaugh officiating, five hundred dollars was raised to finish paying for the church. It was supposed there were one thousand persons present.

Two government officials of Maysville, were in this place Monday, drilling the colored population how and when to cast their vote for congressman.

Let no man who calls himself a Democrat remain at home on the 7th of November but come out boldly to the election and cast your vote for Col. Hurt and reform against the Stalwart Republican. ROMEO.

SARDIS.

The mammoth building being erected in our place by Suit & Boulden, is being pushed with energy to completion. The main building is 28x60 feet having three stories and basement. It is evident the boys intend to add some new business to that of carpentering and the undertaking. The community wish them success, for they are energetic and deserving young men.

Miss Sudie Politt, a most amiable young lady of Mt. Olivet, spent a part of last week, in our village, with the family of Mr. Robert Apple-gate.

The work on the Christian Church will soon be completed, the cupola being properly proportioned, and of handsome design, adds much to the beauty of the building. Mr. Willett, the contractor is a clever gentleman as well as first class workman. Mr. L. H. Bratton, also comes in for a share of credit, particularly on the painting.

The property recently vacated by T. W. Tilton is now occupied by Mr. J. Cabier, who having left his splendid farm on the North Fork, under the management of his son-in-law Mr. French, will for a time, rest from the toils of farm labor. Mr. Cabier with his interesting family are welcomed to our town.

Elder O. A. Carr, of Columbia, Mo., began a series of meetings at this place on the first Lord's day in October, closing on Friday night, following. Mr. Carr is a very fine theologian and his sermons were delivered with power and all clearness, though none were added to the church, which is not always evidence of success, yet to judge from the large and very attentive audience, showing unmistakable manifestation of interest, the meeting surely was a success, notwithstanding, Mr. Carr held a debate at this place a few years ago, with a Methodist brother. The members of the other churches were glad to hear him, for while they may think he is wrong on some points, they regard him as an earnest good man.

C. P. Wheeler, who has been absent for several months, returned home this week.

A. O. White our popular druggist is in Cincinnati, this week, on business.

Elder Wm. Hall, of Rectorville, delivered three very able sermons in the Christian church at this place on Saturday night and Sunday last, which were appreciated by a large and well behaved audience.

Rev. Spates, of the M. E. Church, South, delivered two good sermons from his pulpit here on the fifth Lord's day. Mr. Spates is not only a pleasant speaker, but also a fine vocalist. D.

ABERDEEN ITEMS.

Mrs. Simmons, who accompanied Mrs. McClosky as far as Cincinnati, returned home yesterday.

Mrs. Carey and Miss Sallie Pierce, of Ripley, are the guests of Mrs. Reidle.

Mr. George Enis and family will move here next week.

Mr. Sherban is building an addition to his residence.

Lizzie May, daughter of Mr. J. Newton, was buried to-day. Her sickness was only for a few days, and truly verified, the brightest flowers soonest fade.

DAILY EVENING BULLETIN.

FRIDAY EVENING, NOV. 3, 1882.

ROSSER & McCARTHY,
PUBLISHERS AND PROPRIETORS.

ALL lovers of the solid truth
And seekers for the right,
Should make a point to go and hear
The speeches made to-night.
You'll from Hunt and Phister too,
Of trouble now a brewing,
And all the underhanded things,
The Pot-Lid men are doing.

Ex-Gov. JAMES T. ROBINSON, died at Georgetown on the 1st inst.

A MAN named Tolle was shot in the breast and mortally wounded at Manchester on Thursday evening, during a difficulty. We have not heard the name of his assailant.

Speaking To-night.

Col. J. S. Hurt, the Democratic candidate for congress in this district, and the Hon. E. C. Phister, will speak at the court house this evening, at 7 o'clock. Everybody is invited.

PERSONALS.

Points About People Here and Elsewhere.

Mrs. T. E. Garrison and little daughter, Miss Daisy, who have been visiting friends and relatives in Ohio for the past three months, have returned home.

THE White Collar Company cleared during September and half of October, $38,000. Of this amount the Ohio made the most; the Boston next; the Morning Mail third, and the Bonanza fourth. The Fleetwood came out behind, although her receipts were larger than either of the others, but her expenses were greater.

QUITE a change will be made in the steamboats after the water rises. The Ohio is to be placed in the St. Louis and Huntington trade; the Fleetwood and Bostona will extend their trips to Marietta, and the Telegraph will take the place of the Ohio in the Pomeroy trade. The St. Lawrence will, it is stated, run to Pomeroy and the Sidney to Wheeling.

THE account of the Ashland affair printed elsewhere has been telegraphed to the DAILY BULLETIN, by Hon. D. K. Weis, a well known and honored citizen of that place. It may be relied upon as correct in detail, though he has, inadvertently omitted to mention the firing upon the troops from the train, and from the landing at Ashland, which have been well established. The list of the killed and wounded is the only correct one that has yet been printed.

B. McAuley.

The Boston Journal in speaking of the appearance of this distinguished comedian in that city, says:

All the interest is not allowed to centre around one or two figures, but the play-wright has created an ensemble of characters, the relations of which to his hero bring out the latter against a strong and natural background. Uncle Dan's amusing adventures in search of John Smith, his dangerous encounters with sharpshooters and roughs, his perplexities, disappointments, dangers and triumphs, his discovery of more than he started to find, and his general success at last are incidents all of which are admirably worked up, and from beginning to end the play holds undivided attention, its many strong points creating unbounded enthusiasm. As Uncle Dan, Mr. McAuley presents a clear cut type of the honest old resident of the back districts of our Eastern States. When the warmed-hearted deputy sheriff appeared, the audience realized the presence of an honest plain-spoken, plain-dealing man, who has business before him, and who goes at it in a business like way. His humor, his anger, his sorrow are all natural, and control the feelings of those before him with a power that marks him as being a true artist. His trials create sympathy, his danger creates an intensity of interest, and his triumphs are regarded with unmistakable satisfaction.

DEFEATED LYNCHERS.

Statement of Wednesday's Affair by a Citizen of Ashland.

Correct List of the Killed and Wounded—The Excitement Abating—Citizens' Meeting to be Held.

Special to the DAILY BULLETIN.

ASHLAND, KY., Nov. 3, 1882.—Neal and Craft were granted a change of venue by Judge Brown to Carter county, on Tuesday. They were taken by the military at Catlettsburg aboard the Granite State. After the prisoners were put aboard the boat the streets leading to the landing were guarded by soldiers to prevent any attempt to rescue them. While in this situation a large number of men arrived from Ashland and appointed a committee to wait on Major Allen to demand the delivery of the prisoners to them. This the Major politely declined and ordered his men aboard the boat. The men from Ashland and a large number from Catlettsburg then boarded the train and left about the time the boat rounded out and arrived at Ashland ahead of her. There must have been five or six hundred men and boys on the train.

Several thousand persons had assembled on Front street, men, women and children to see the boat as she passed the city. Very little time elapsed before she rounded the point and as she came in full view of the landing, it was apparent that the soldiers apprehended an attack and were prepared for any that might be made. The crowd on the landing were greatly excited. There being no other boat at the wharf the ferryboat was boarded by from thirty to fifty men and boys, some of them armed with guns. The boat was headed for the Granite State. After the head of the boat was out toward the Ohio shore, some one on her hailed the steamer by waving a handkerchief, but she kept ahead of the ferryboat, all the time approaching her, and when about seventy-five yards from the Granite State a fire was opened on her by those on the ferryboat which was immediately returned by the soldiery.

Several persons on the ferryboat were slightly wounded, one of whom James McDonald has since died. The worst work was done among the citizens who were taking no hand in the matter, but were merely on Front street as spectators. The firing among the citizens was most wanton and unprovoked.

The following is a list of the killed and wounded:

Col. Lewis Reppard, while standing on top of the bank, shot through the heart and killed instantly.
George Keener, killed standing on the bank.
James McDonald, shot in the shoulder, since died. He was on the ferryboat.
John Bank, wounded, shot on the boat.
Charles Bollinger aged fifteen, leg badly shattered.
Graham Randall, shot in the shoulder, supposed to be mortally wounded.
Julius Simmons, shot in the leg.
Willie Searcy, boy, shot in the bowels.
William Springer, on the boat, shot in the shoulder.
Mart Dunlap, shot in the hip.
Mrs. Jack Searcy, shot in the shoulder.
Dr. Gill, shot slightly in the right arm.
Alexander Walton, shot in the hip.
Mrs. B. S. Butler, shot in the thigh, flesh wound.
A. H. Nixon, shot in the hand.
Thos. Bird, on the boat shot in the shoulder.
Martin Green, colored, shot in the leg.
Mr. Ball, shot in the leg.
John Gallagher, shot in the mouth and legs.
Robert Pritchard Ball, shot in the upper lip, while getting off the cars, broke a small bone of his leg.

Some of the balls passed over the houses into the park and killed a cow. Great indignation is felt toward the military for firing among the crowd of men, women and children on Front street, who were there simply as spectators. The excitement, though somewhat abated, is still high. The dead will be buried to-day. A citizens' meeting will be held to-night. Circuit Court has adjourned until next Wednesday. D. K. WEIS.

Interview with a Passenger on the Granite State—Some Points Made Plain that have not yet Reached the Ears of the Public.

Cincinnati Times-Star.

"Was it lively?" said a passenger who came down on the Granite State, "well, it just was. It was like running a blockade during the war; the people were crazy."

"Tell us your experience."
"Well, it was an experience I want to shun next time. When the boat landed at Catlettsburg stages were run out as usual, the crew having no idea of a disturbance. The Captain was on the roof directing his crew, and afterwards went below to talk to a hog shipper. The first thing he knew a file of soldiers, comprising two companies, marched down the bank and took up a position on the boat's forecastle. The prisoners (Neal and Craft) were taken on board, and three companies remained on shore to keep back the crowd of people who followed the procession.

The commander of the brigade just took charge of the boat in regular military style, and she was regularly pressed into service, correct documents being served on the captain. If the crowd had made a demonstration then it would have been a terrible affair and no mistake. The boat backed out without any trouble, and shortly we saw the mob chasing the boat in a train of cars on shore. Angry fists were shook from the car windows, and shots were frequently fired by the mob, but the boat was too far out in the river to be touched. When Ashland was reached, and the ferryboat was seen to be in possession of the mob, the soldiers were drawn up on the roof, the guards and the lower decks. On the roof the soldiers on the left hand side of the boat were flat on their stomachs, and on the right hand side, below the skylights, another file was ranged. The first shot was fired by the mob, when several more followed. Then it was the soldiers let go. There was a whole volley fired, being mainly directed to the pilot house of the ferryboat. That is one reason why so many bullets reached the shore, although some inexperienced hands had hold of rifles, which were fired at random.

"By—I saw a fellow step boldly out on the deck of the ferryboat, take deliberate aim at our pilot and fire. The aim was so close that it splintered the windowsill of the pilot house. That pilot was a plucky fellow. He just threw open the sashes, remarking that he didn't want glass in his, and gave them a full unobstructed view of his person, coolly performing the duty of his watch. I believe his name is Brose Dennis.

"That made the soldiers mad and they let go. That shot aimed at our pilot was one of the first fired by the mob.

"Our pilot's conduct was strongly in contrast with the fellow on the ferryboat. When the first volley from the soldiers riddled his box he let go of the wheel and fell back. Then he jumped up and fell over again going through the sash to the deck below. How he escaped was a sort of a miracle, but I heard he was only hurt in the hand.

"It's strange no more were hurt than are reported. Captain Kirker was standing on the roof at the first fire when a bullet whizzed past his face and another went between his legs, both striking the chimney. Then he stepped to one side, and just then the soldiers back of him let go and bullets flew by his ears like hail stones. He hasn't a scratch. He was a pretty cool fellow and didn't show any scare at all.

"I saw another pretty cool chap sitting in a chair on the roof with his legs crossed and handling a revolver, which he loaded and fired as unconcerned as if he had been shooting at a common target. Bullets fell all about him, but he wasn't touched.

"The prisoners? Oh, yes; they showed some excitement but felt pretty safe.

"What made the soldiers return fire so readily, did you ask? Well, I'll tell you. While they were at Catlettsburg they met with all sorts of insults on the streets, being frequently called — cowardly curs, and that no collision occurred at Catlettsburg was remarkable. The militia felt last night sore toward the people, who boasted that if they undertook to capture Neal and Craft they would meet with no resistance. There were two or three companies of boys who were frightened nearly out of their wits, but there were a few determined old soldiers who had smelt powder before, and they were smarting under the treatment they had received by the populace. The crack gunner of the Louisville regiment was along with his big cannon, and could hardly be restrained from pouring its contents into the ferryboat. He carries numerous prizes for champion marksmanship, and if he had been permitted to spread himself there would have been frightful carnage. He just begged to be allowed to dislodge the locomotive of the train, which was rushing the mob to Ashland, and the boys all admitted that he could do it.

ROOF PAINTING.

A Few Plain Facts in Regard to TIN and IRON ROOFS.

Preserve your roofs by having a coat of

ARMSTRONG'S ELASTIC ROOF PAINT

Applied on them. After ten years test in different cities in the state of Kentucky, Armstrong's Elastic Roof Paint is acknowledged superior to any other in use. It forms a heavy elastic body smooth and glossy; it will not crack or scale, dries quickly and will remain without repainting from 8 to 10 years. This paint will stop all leaks in tin or iron roofs and remain so for many years. It has been applied to many of the best buildings, both public and private, in this state, of which I have testimonials to show from gentlemen whose standing in society and business qualifications makes their opinion and knowledge of its worth, after having tried it for years on their roofs, which of itself is the best of guarantees of its useful and valuable worth to all who have or metal roofs. If you have a leaky or a worn out roof that has decayed from neglect of being properly covered with paint, and it leaks and your tinners has failed to stop the leaks, give my paint a trial, and if I do not stop the leaks entirely there will be no charge made.

I will remain in this city a few days with the view of introducing my Elastic Paint, of which I am the inventor and manufacturer and sole owner. I manufacture but the two kinds, the Black Elastic and the Elastic Brown. Neither of these paint contain any linseed oil in their composition, and both being fire proof when applied on shingles or wood. The Black Elastic can stand more intense heat than any other paint made or known in this country, and is calculated for tin or iron roofs.

A NORSE FARM.

Our interpreter, like many of his class in Norway, was an excellent cook, and we perhaps valued his services most in the latter capacity, as we ourselves possessed sufficient knowledge of the language for all ordinary purposes. He was assisted by the farmer's wife, who owned the house and kept us supplied with milk and butter from her dairy. It was a comparatively rich farm, where they pastured fourteen cows this summer, for the hay harvest had been good last year, and upon the excellence of the crop depends the number of cattle these poor people keep through the winter, as they never buy or sell fodder, each farmer maintaining as large a stock as his own land can feed. There were more than twenty farms in this little valley, only four miles long; a few had tenant proprietors, but the greater part were rented by their occupiers, who have always to pay down a large sum on taking possession, with a proportionately reduced yearly rent. The landlords do not seem to take much interest in their property, and as for improvements, there is no likelihood of disputes on this head, as things are just where they were 500 years ago. At the age of sixty it is the custom for a farmer to make over the holding to his son, receiving a sum of money for his interest and a promise that the son will house and feed him for the rest of his days. Thus the old couple have a quiet old age secured to them, and the farm is worked by active hands. Whether these arrangements have a legal sanction we know not, but they certainly form the regular observance of a district in many ways remarkable for its maintenance of ancient customs. One of the most curious is the habit of using patronymics, which has died out in many parts of Norway, but is still retained here, and causes a great deal of confusion in successive generations, especially as it is the rule for the eldest son always to be baptized with his grandfather's Christian name; thus Eric, whose father was Lars, is simply Eric Larsen, and is bound to call his eldest son Lars Ericson. A wife, too, does not adopt her husband's name, but remains with the euphonious title of, let us say, Petrina Jacobsdatter.—Macmillan's Magazine.
